of Department.

A new milk inspection ordinance goes into effect here tomorrow. By its provisions every person selling milk in this city must be registered in the city clerk's office, that is to these big concerns will have to ship all in the city clerk's office, that is to say, give their names and addresses and places of business. They must also register their cows and give a sufficient description of each animal to enable the inspector to check it up when inspecting the herd. Every dalveman sailing milk in this city milk supply registered. As this is impossible, these big concerns will have to ship all their products. Not a drop of milk can be sold in Topeka after October 1, except from registered cows that have been inspected and bear the 0, k, of the inspector. Of course, a reasonable time will be given after October 1, to when inspecting milk in this city milk supply registered. Private indalryman selling milk in this city must have his wagons and milk cans numbered. Every milk depot in the city must exercise the uttermost of care and vigilance in keeping the milk cold and clean.

A city milk inspector, Dr. Campbell of Hiswatha, will assume charge of this department tomerrow and will inspect and soore all the dairies sup-plying milk for this city and inspect all their cows and report on their condition at least twice a year. He will also test milk sold here at any time and place that may suit him.

And in the meantime the price of milk in Topeka has been advanced one cent on the quart to take effect tomorrow, as a result of this aforesaid milk ordinance.

The expense of milk inspection to the dairyman is the cost of registra-tion, $1 per year and for the tags and numbers for wagons and cans. A cow will give about five quarts of milk a day, year in and out, or over 1,500 quarts per year, so the total cost of inspection would be less than two cents per 100 quarts, and the raise in prices is one cent per quart. Of course there is the added cost to secure cleanliness and sanitation and cost of inspection, everything else in this world in the shape of regulation, falls upon the consumer. But the consumer profits thereby in getting clean and pure milk. Mayor Green stated today that Dr. Campbell, the new inspector. Dr. Campbell, the new inspector, would be here tomorrow. He is a graduate chemist and veterinarian of experience and has the recommendation of the head of the State Agricultural college at Manhattan. The inspector receives a sainty of $1,200 per page and must but in a head of $2.60. year and must put up a bond of $500. He must test the milk cows for tuberculosis for other disease and check them all up twice a year. He must score the dairies and enforce the laws of cleanliness and sanitation. He must conduct a chemical test of the milk and see that the number of bacteria are within the health limit. When this department has become organized Mayor Green is confiden that the consumers here will ge pure, clean milk from healthy cows. If this is accomplished the new milk ordinance is well worth while,
